U. S. Citizens Warned On Aid to Cuban Raids

MIAMI, Sept. 15 (UPI)—A tight new Federal crackdown against Americans seeking to help Cuban exile raiders — similar to one enforced against refugees themselves — went into effect today with a series of "strong warnings" issued by the Customs Department to six United States citizens.

Free-lance photographer Alexander I. Rorke Jr., 37, who participated in a bombing raid on Cuba last April, said he was "suddenly summoned" to U. S. Customs headquarters here last night and cautioned not to violate the "munitions control laws" of the United States.

The penalties for violations include imprisonment for up to two years and a $25,000 fine for each offense.

G. Harvey Summ, acting Cuban affairs coordinator here for the U. S. State Department, confirmed that such "stern warnings" are "in the process of being given" to six Americans.
